Abstract: China is currently undergoing a period of significant social change. The social structure and economic development of the State are experiencing very swift changes, the society's current family structure is crumbling and moral values have been affected more than ever before. The family value system was the first to be hit. With the new socialist market economy, rebuilding family values is becoming increasingly crucial. The three following actions must be taken: encouraging family cohesion in keeping with modern social relationships, improving relationships between spouses in the modern family, establishing equality and fraternity to develop a well-rounded, modern character.
